

As manager of a community radio station, I have learned that localism in media is very important. The large corporate media giants do not cover local issues. As a community station, we do and the community benefits in many ways: knowing who is in the community to knowing what is happening in the community. I urge the FCC to continue, even expand, the requirement of all media to serve its community by providing a vehicle for the community to discuss and learn about local events.